E. J. Nwabuzor and Tunde Agara (2006), â€œImpact of Globalization on Africeli

African anti-state conflicts of the East-West Cold War periodare different from intastate communal conflicts at present raging as a result of North-Sdevselopment. outh Cold War that is prosecuted through the regime of Bretton Woods institutions. The North-inspired globalization programs of Structural Adjustment, free trade, privatization and deregulation have brought with them mounting mass poverty, underdevelopment and delegitimization of most African regimes. The direct consequences have been intercommunal violent conflicts which are further blocking African development.. To escape from this vicious circle, Africa must force itself to look inward, and strive to carefully extricate itself from the most noxious policies currently being propagated by the Bretton Woods regime of globalization.
