

"Examination of Legal Regimes and Institutional Frameworks for Oil Pollution M

Abstract

Oil pollution in Nigeria is a sensitive issue that has not only threatened both human health but also the God given fauna and flora as well as the environment. Despite the plethora of legislations that have been put in place, there appears to be a poor implementation of laws with respect to oil pollution. This paper examined the various legal regimes to attempt to find out why these regimes have not been effective and proffered suggestions on ways and means of enhancing an effective implementation of these laws.
